Video Article

Christopher Hughes: An in vitro model for the Study of Angiogenesis (Interview)

Christopher C.W. Hughes

Department of Molecular Biology and Biochemistry, University of California, Irvine

URL: <http://www.jove.com/index/Details.stp?ID=175>

DOI: 10.3791/175

Citation: Hughes C.C.W. (2007). Christopher Hughes: An in vitro model for the Study of Angiogenesis (Interview). JoVE. 3. <http://www.jove.com/index/Details.stp?ID=175>, doi: 10.3791/175

Abstract

Christopher C.W. Hughes describes the utility of his culture system for studying angiogenesis in vitro. He explains the importance of fibroblasts that secrete a critical, yet unidentified, soluble factor that allow endothelial cells to form vessels in culture that branch, form proper lumens, and undergo anastomosis.

References