The June 1, 2008, article by Zhu et al, entitled “High Expression of Macrophage Colony-Stimulating Factor in Peritumoral Liver Tissue Is Associated With Poor Survival After Curative Resection of Hepatocellular Carcinoma” (J Clin Oncol 26:2707-2716, 2008), contained an error.

In the first column and fourth row of Table 2, the percentage of patients with high intratumoral macrophage (MΦ) density and positive hepatitis B e antigen (HBeAg) was given as 3%, whereas it should have been 30%. In addition, the percentage of patients with high intratumoral macrophage (MΦ) density and negative hepatitis B e antigen (HBeAg) was given as 97%, whereas it should have been 70%.

The January 10, 2012, article by Wells et al, entitled “Vandetanib in Patients With Locally Advanced or Metastatic Medullary Thyroid Cancer: A Randomized, Double-Blind Phase III Trial” (J Clin Oncol 30:134-141, 2012), contained an error.

In the Results section, under Efficacy, the fourth sentence in the first paragraph incorrectly stated the 6-month PFS rates for vandetanib and placebo as 83% and 63%, respectively, whereas they should have been 91% and 74% respectively. The corrected sentence is as follows:

“The PFS at 6 months was 91% (vandetanib) and 74% (placebo).”

The February 20, 2012, article by Tsan et al, entitled “Statins and the Risk of Hepatocellular Carcinoma in Patients With Hepatitis B Virus Infection” (J Clin Oncol 30:623-630, 2012), contained errors.

An affiliation for Yu-Tse Tsan was given as Chung Shan Medical University, whereas it should have been Chung Shan Medical University School of Medicine.

In addition, in Figure 1, the unit of cumulative incidences was given as “cases/100,000 person-years,” whereas it should have been “%.” The y-axis scale was also incorrect. The corrected figure is reprinted here in its entirety.
