Errata

The December 1, 2016, article by Gadgeel et al, entitled “Pooled Analysis of CNS Response to Alectinib in Two Studies of Pretreated Patients With ALK-Positive Non–Small-Cell Lung Cancer” (J Clin Oncol 34:4079-4085, 2016), contained an error.

In Figure 1, the colors were reversed. Yes (n = 34) should have been represented in yellow, not blue and No (n = 16) should have been represented in blue, not yellow.

The online version has been corrected in departure from the print. The authors apologize for the error.

DOI: 10.1200/JCO.2017.73.5142; published May 10, 2017

The April 1, 2017, article by Messori et al, entitled “Appraisal of Innovative Anticancer Agents: Do the Scores of European Society for Medical Oncology–Magnitude of Clinical Benefit Scale and American Society of Clinical Oncology Task Force Correlate With Survival Gains?” (J Clin Oncol 10.1200/JCO.2016.69.9645), was published with errors.

The authors have clarified the relationship between ESMO grades and ASCO scores.

The online version has been corrected in departure from the print. The authors apologize for the errors.

DOI: 10.1200/JCO.2017.73.5381; published May 10, 2017

Just Published – ASCO Educational Book Collections: Immuno-Oncology

This volume from ASCO Educational Book Collections offers a carefully curated selection of exceptional immuno-oncology articles, handpicked from past volumes of the ASCO Educational Book, a National Library of Medicine-indexed and peer-reviewed scholarly resource. Read the latest developments in the field and learn about the disease-specific breakthroughs. If you're an oncologist, hematologist, radiologist, general practitioner, fellow, or other clinical professional, this will keep you current on cutting-edge developments in the exciting field of immuno-oncology. Download your e-book today for $49 at shop.asco.org (ASCO members save 20%). Available in ePub and Mobi files suitable for most eReaders.